

How to Survive in College

- Become an Independent and Active Learner
- Learn How to Impress Your Professor

Become an Independent and Active Learner

- Learn what motivates you.
- Know your goals.
- Keep organized.
- Believe you can be successful.
- Enhance your levels of aspiration.
- Establish an effective study area.
- Use many resources for learning.
- Recognize the importance of rehearsal and review.
- Develop higher level thinking skills.

-
- Demonstrate responsibility for your education.
 - Seek opportunities for learning experiences.
 - Consider alternate possibilities.
 - Broaden your horizons.
 - Take studying seriously.
 - Read widely and read often.

Source: Pearson Education, 2008

How to Impress Your Professor

- Attend Class.
- Do your homework and come to class prepared.
- Bring your textbook to class.
- Arrive on time, ask questions and participate in class.
- If you don't understand something, ask the professor to explain.
- If you have to miss class, let your professor know ahead of time.
- Remember that your professor is a person, too.

Source: Pearson Education, 2008.

- Be ready to show interest and a positive attitude.
- Be ready to read.
- Be ready to do some writing.
- Be ready to take good class notes.
- Turn your cell phone OFF.

Chia, F. H. (2007). College 101: Making the greatest first impression on your new instructor and classmates. Innovation Abstracts. Vol XXIX, No 16.